In the first years [at FSIL] I was still a child...I was learning, I was asked a lot of questions which enable me to understand the importance of nursing in the world and in a community. I started to fall in love with this science. With help and support of our dear Dean I began to feel useful and to consider myself as a part of the society in which I live, especially in Haiti. In the second year I saw life in another way, I started to understand the difference that a nurse can do...
